UK Outlook for Friday 28 May 2021 to Sunday 6 Jun 2021:
High pressure will be the largely dominant feature across the UK during this period, as it gradually builds in from the west. This will bring mainly fine and settled conditions across the UK, with temperatures recovering and feeling locally warm in southern and central areas. There however remains the possibility of cloudier weather and some rain at times towards the west and northwest of the UK. Mostly dry conditions are likely to continue through this period especially towards the south and east but there remains the risk of some brief interludes of rain or showers, most likely affecting areas in the northwest and far south. Temperatures overall are likely to be close to average for the time of year, with some warmer days balanced out by colder nights.
